Introduction

The following is a compilation of scholarships; bursaries and awards that may help students finance their education at post secondary institutions. Since most of the information is based on the previous year, please inquire early as to changed conditions such as application deadlines. Student Services at the Grande Prairie Composite High School should have the most recent information and application forms or know where to get them.

Here are some internet sites that may be helpful:

A book from the Canadian Guidance Services listing various Canadian scholarships is available for student use. This book is available in the Student Services Office.

Students up to age 25 whose parent or guardian is disabled or deceased may be eligible for Canada Pension Plan benefits. Phone 1-800-277-9914 for more information.

Remember, these scholarships, bursaries, and awards are meant for you! Some are based on participation, some on financial need, some on academic achievement, some on geographic area and some on a combination of these and others. You probably satisfy a number of the conditions or you can put yourself in contention by checking the criteria and making your best effort to meet those requirements. Do not underestimate your accomplishments or abilities; your participation on teams, club executives, community groups, volunteer agencies, and the work world can help your chances. The only sure thing is...if you do not apply, you will not receive that particular scholarship or bursary.

Scholarships marked with an asterisk * are specific to Grande Composite High School. These awards are presented at our Academic Awards Night.

We hope your efforts in your grad year are rewarded and we look forward to helping you attain those goals that you have set for yourself.

Others

Each college, university or technical institute has its own awards office with a large number of scholarships and bursaries available. They want those monies used, so it is in your best interest to apply. One application form covers most awards but if you are in the top 10% academically, the universities have their own elite scholarships that require different application forms and deadlines. For instance, the Leadership Awards at the University of Alberta (value: $1000-$5000; number 50+) for entering students has a March deadline.

Each institution has its own awards office and information booklets. They want you to take advantage of the awards; do not disappoint them!

Check with the counselling office to see if it has the information and application forms; the counsellors will certainly have addresses and phone numbers for you to enquire further.

Military

One method of obtaining subsidies for university is often overlooked and that is through the Canadian Armed Forces. A number of plans are available if you meet their academic and medical standards. The admission requirements are very high with emphasis on mathematics and the sciences. The plans are: ROTP, RETP, and CFCCEP.

ROTP (Regular Officer Training Plan). This pays the cost of tuition, uniforms, books, and instruments, plus a monthly salary. Free medical and dental care is also provided. You would likely go to a Military College or in some cases attend a civilian university. As an Officer Cadet you would train with the military during the summer. Upon graduation you are normally obliged to serve 5 years with the military as an officer.

RETP (Reserve Entry Training Plan). For those who do not want to commit themselves to a full time service career. Admission and course requirements are the same as for ROTP applicants and the same education and training are provided. But RETP cadets pay annual fees to help pay cost of tuition, clothing, books, instruments, laundry, meals and accommodation. You are required to take summer military training for which you are paid. Scholarships are also available. Graduates of RETP undertake to serve in the reserve.

CFCCEP (Canadian Forces Community College Entry Plan). This is for those wishing to take pilot training in an approved community college aviation technology program. This leads to a diploma and a commercial pilot licence. Mount Royal College in Calgary is an example of such an approved course.

Apply as early in the school year as possible to a Canadian Forces Recruiting Centre as selection of candidates is finalized in April of each year.

Cooperative Education

Many Universities and Colleges offer cooperative education/training programs. With this format a student takes the regular academic courses but at specific points in the academic program works in a related industry or government position. This usually extends graduation by a year but the student earns money while working, thus easing financial strain. The other key benefits are: important people contacts for future employment in your field, practical training to match with your studies, and experience to enhance your employability. As you can see this type of program has very real benefits and should be investigated.

Family and Friends

Have your parents check with their employer, union, or association for scholarships that might be available to the children of those they employ or who are members.

Friends might know of monies that are available for application. Follow up on any leads.

The cost of post secondary education to the student is rising at an accelerating rate. To reduce the financial burden on your family and yourself, look into, and act on any possibilities that may help pay for your higher education.
